OurHealthVA.org Welcomes TreatmentDiaries.com as a New Campus Partner

Winchester, Virginia: TreatmentDiaries.com announces a partnership with Our Health an organization supporting partner agencies to improve the health and well-being of the Winchester community by enhancing capacity, fostering collaboration, and improving outcomes. Both organizations already serve a vital role in the community and aligning missions and coordinating activities makes great sense in an effort to make an even bigger difference in supporting those in need.

Our Health values a variety of partnerships, similar to TreatmentDiaries.com, which offer opportunities to collaborate within the community. These partnerships include Valley Health, the Free Medical Clinics, Concern Hotline, Faith in Action, the Adult Care Center, Healthy Families and several others. Our Health supports the Kendall Community Campus which is home to sixteen Campus partners, offering a convenient location in downtown Winchester to better serve its clients. Several grant partners are connected through past and current grants being administered by Our Health. In 2004, Our Health created a Volunteer Action Center to assist its partners in the recruitment, placement and recognition of their many volunteers.

Our Health strives to create and engage in a variety of agency partnerships, which open the door to more effectively meet the needs of our community! “We realize we have a role in shaping services in our community, but we also realize that our role must connect and collaborate with the missions of all other nonprofit, health and human service agencies that are our neighbors, in order to be genuinely effective! For this reason, we are excited to partner with TreatmentDiaries.com, an organization truly connecting our community with health in mind and we look forward to sharing more about their mission with the community” said Sharen Gromling, Executive Director Our Health.

“With thousands of visitors to our site it has always been central to our mission to make their journey with an illness easier to navigate. Sharing other community partners with those on TreatmentDiaries will make the connection to resources even more accessible,” said Amy Ohm President and Founder TreatmentDiaries.com. “We are a free resource connecting individuals on a shared journey with illness at a time when they need all of the support they can possibly get. Because of Our Health’s many partner connections, we are delighted to partner with them” she continued.

Treatment Diaries Inc. www.TreatmentDiaries.com is a unique social network which launched in early 2011, providing REAL information exchange between people coping with or caring for anyone with a chronic illness, mental health condition, or rare disease. This virtual support is free and always available; offering a safe place to keep diaries anonymously of your daily journey, across multiple conditions - either privately or shared with others, enabling the exchange of treatment insight, mutual support, and encouragement.
